Complete Market Reports Corrected Each Day Giving the Wholesale Prices of Commodities, Farm Produce and Vegetables.

Portland, Nov. 27.—Wholesale fruit dealers of Portland explain the vast differences in price of bananas in Central America and in this city by saying there is great loss in transportation.

"It is true that the banana producer at Costa Rica only gets 25c a bunch for his fruit, while the Portland retailer pays $2.50 for the same bunch," a prominent dealer said today, "but the loss en route largely explains the cause. Bananas shipped in ripener condition than the consignees desire, and the entire carload may prove a dead loss on reaching its destination. The dealer then puts in his claim to the Fruit Dispatch Company, which must pay for the loss."

"Portland is not importing turkeys from the east this year, as San Francisco and Seattle are doing," one dealer said, "and so we will depend entirely on our home supply. San Francisco is importing largely from Texas, as the demand of that city cannot be wholly supplied by California; while Seattle is bringing turkeys from the eastern states, and is not looking to Oregon for any birds this year."
